Chairman Brown's Comments on Channel 23: Chairman Brown pointed out that graphics were playing on the meeting room's big screen and televisions, and he explained that they were the introduction to a "new thing that we've decided to do." He told the audience that everybody likes to gather around high school football and, since the County has made upgrades to its cable channel and is displaying Board meetings on the website, the County had decided to record football games that could be replayed on the County's television station. He said the program is called the "Fayette County Game of the Week," that Ms. Jan Horne has volunteered to record the games, and that Chick-Fil-A Dwarf House in Fayetteville has covered all the costs; meaning no cost to the taxpayers. He added that the programming would include commentary from the coaches as well as a pre-game show. He anticipated that the programs would begin playing by next Wednesday, and that Whitewater High School, McIntosh High School and Sandy Creek High School had already agreed to participate in this endeavor. He encouraged everyone to tune in and watch the games.

PUBLIC HEARING:

There was no Public Hearing.

PUBLIC COMMENT:

Lori Klonoski: Mrs. Klonoski displayed three pictures to the Board and the audience utilizing the meeting room's big screen and televisions, and she said she wanted to speak about the Core Infrastructure Special Purpose Local Option Sales Tax (SPLOST) referendum that will be voted on in November. The pictures displayed erosion problems in her yard due to stormwater runoff. She explained that the stormwater runoff had created a ravine in her yard that is 26 feet deep, 80 feet across at its widest point, and is 210 feet long—traversing most of her property line. She encouraged everyone to vote in favor of the SPLOST referendum this November. She told everyone that she has lived in Huntington South subdivision, in unincorporated Fayette County, since 1995, and that she knew they were in trouble after the first big rainstorm. She explained that stormwater drainage from higher ground channels through a culvert beneath the road and is eroding away the land on both her lot and her next door neighbor's property. She told the Board that, for many years, her husband contacted local county officials and researched everything he could find to determine what recourse could be had for this issue; however, there were no solutions to be found. She also told the Board that her neighbor had also researched the problem and discussed it with the County, but that he also got nowhere with his efforts. Additionally, Mrs. Klonoski told the Board that her neighbors have faced other issues with stormwater drainage such as an uprooted tree that fell and smashed a back deck. She stated that her neighbor has built a fence so that his grandchildren would not fall into the ravine, but that another uprooted tree fell onto the fence. She explained that her neighbor had paid $2,600.00 for a company to drop boulders on the ravine wall along his yard. Mrs. Klonoski told the Board that when her part of the subdivision was built in 1983, there were no homes on the higher terrain even though there were plans to build on the higher ground. She said that it was known that there was going to be a problem with the two lowest lots because there was inadequate planning for runoff from those homes to be built on higher ground, and that now the runoff from the homes are channeled into her property. She pointed out that the County engineer had approved the plat, and that the County added a stamp that reads: Fayette County does not accept the ownership maintenance or responsibility for any drainage easement or overall drainage plan, or the lack of one, indicated by this plat. Mrs. Klonoski interpreted the stamp as the County's way to absolve itself from responsibility. She acknowledged that when the Stormwater Utility Fee was passed in 2012 that she hoped that the damage to her property would end because one of the functions of the fee is to repair infrastructures that pose a threat to landowners and their property. She told the audience that the SPLOST referendum would save her home from destruction, and that she could recapture the value of her home. She reiterated that the ravine is huge and each rain is eroding more and more of her land as most of her lot is sinking toward the ravine. She understood that fixing the problems is expensive, and she understood that the Board of Commissioners admitted that money has not been set aside over the years to cover the costs. She thought that the only way the County could make the improvements was with the SPLOST revenue, and that the one-penny tax would bring enough money to improve the County's most serious infrastructure problems. She told the audience that if the SPLOST referendum does not pass, then the Stormwater Utility Fees would not come close to providing enough money to adequately deal with the most serious problems. She closed saying that at some point every community has to address the issue of an aging infrastructure, and that Fayette County's time has come. Copies of the pictures provided by Mrs. Klonoski, identified as "Attachment 12", follow these minutes and are made an official part hereof.

Denise Ognio: Mrs. Ognio informed the audience that on Saturday, September 14, 2013, a seminar would be held on "The Making of America." She said the seminar would be about the first settlers from England through the signing of the United States Constitution, and that this seminar was in conjunction with Constitution Week. She told everyone that the Greater Fayette Republican Women's Club was sponsoring the seminar, and that she had two free tickets to attend. She said they did not want any empty seats, and she asked for those who were interested in attending to see her after the meeting. She informed everyone that lunch would be provided, and that while the seminar would last from 8:30 a.m. until 4:30 p.m., that the seminar, which is a historical study, was worth it. Chairman Brown announced that both he and Commissioner Barlow would attend the seminar.

Frank Gardner: Mr. Gardner replied to Mrs. Klonoski's comments, and he said there are many places throughout Fayette County that have been approved for building permits. He said the county stamp stated: "The County is not responsible for water damage or drainage and stuff." He said it seems logical to him that before plats are approved they should be taken to the Planning Commission and addressed at that level. He pointed out that in the future there would be many acres that would be developed, and that the engineer and Fayette County should take responsibility so that the builders would take care of the problem.
